

Don't Use The F-Word

© 2009 Will Stanley

She was the sweetest thing, I had ever seen
And I couldn't wait to make her mine
I'd done every single thing, I could think of Til finally she gave me the sign
And as she lie there, delectable and bare
From my lips slipped a phrase from nowhere

She said "Don't use the F-word, it don't turn me on
I need to feel that you're gentle, cuz I can see that you're strong
If you need to be talking, when we're in bed
Please don't use the F-word
Use the L-word instead."

Eventually, she married me, and we became a team
And I thought it might be time to chase my dream
I'd always written country songs and played some guitar
Perhaps I had the makings of a star
But as the years began to tick, and my career wouldn't click
I began to get discouraged and to swear.

She said "Don't use the F-word, it don't get things done.
Keep your nose to the grindstone, and show them what you're made of.
You don't hate what you're doing, you'll write songs till you're dead
So don't use the F-word
Use the L-word instead."

In the modern world, 4 letter words and such
Have become like so much la-di-da
That we pay them no mind as we bandy them about
They're just background blah-blah-blah

Now I don't use the F-word, cuz it don't turn her on
It doesn't excite her, and it's not what she wants
It's true I like talking, I leave no thought unsaid
But now I don't use the F-word
I use the L-word instead.
Yes I don't use the F-word,
I use the L-word instead.
