

How Will I know If I Don't Ask

© 2014 Will Stanley

I've known you quite a while
And based on your smile
I'd say you like me quite a lot.
But I'm not quite sure
And I'd like to be reassured
That I really truly have a shot.

I've tried to stiffen my spine
And blurt out "would you like to be mine"
But each time I've arrived at this point
My heart's declined.

But do you love me, it's time to be rash
Cuz I really need the facts
No more hesitation, I'd rather be brash
Cuz how will I know if,
How will I know if I don't ask.

You're kind of shy
And I'm the kind of guy
Who fears rejection more than most.
But I'll lay it on the line
Cuz it's finally time
For me to stop being a milquetoast.

Please don't take too long
Cuz I'm afraid my heart isn't strong
If you think, I'm not the one
I'll be gone.

But do you love me, it's time to be rash
Cuz I really need the facts
No more hesitation, I'd rather be brash
Cuz how will I know if,
How will I know if I don't ask.

Your lips are moving, but I can't hear a word
Everything around me is a blur
I've got to bring myself back down to earth
No matter how afraid I am, of getting hurt.

Instrumental

I could be seeing things
Something's tugging at my heartstrings
Is this a cruel mirage
Or the real thing?

You say you love me, and I feel whiplash
My life zooms by me in a flash
I'm glad I didn't hold back, afraid I might crash
Cuz how would I know if,
How would I know if I don't ask.

Cuz how will I know if,
How will I know if I don't ask.
