

Playing the Game

You told me the truth
That is, according to you
I had nothing to fear, dear
Of course you, would never be untrue

But I wasn't so sure
My instincts aren't usually that poor
I think you're the kind who Knows how to keep their secrets secure

I've seen how you behave
And though it's depraved
Rather than assigning blame

I'm gonna act just the same
Then I'll be playing the game.

Whenever you leave the house
I'll be on the lookout
I'll want to make sure I know
Where you are really going to go.

Cuz I'll need the space
To secure a place
To heat up a brand new flame

You'll see you and I will be just the same
We'll both be playing the game.

It's not that I'm, doin' double-timin'
Just for revenge
But I don't want to lie, it'll help my Emotions to mend.

Instrumental

Suddenly, you're home
I'm tired of bein' alone
I guess my plans were all in vain

Cuz you and I aren't just the same
You're the one playing the game.
And though it makes me quite insane,
And it's a total pain
I can't go playing the game.
You're the only one playing the game.

© 2015 Will Stanley