

Two Can Play This Game

© 2008 Will Stanley

You told Mike that I'm a lazy bum
And as soon as danger threatens, I'm the first to run
He also says, you called me a crackhead
And if it weren't for rehab, I'd be long since dead.

Bobby winks every time we pass a bar
And slinks down in his seat when we see a squad car
I can only imagine what he thinks I might have done
He's keeps asking me, all these questions about guns.

Two can play this game, it ain't solitaire
You think you've beaten me, but you best beware
The tables can be turned and cause you pain, cuz two can play this game.

Mary acts afraid to call her friends
She doesn't want them to see her in a pigpen
She wonders why my money is always so tight
Today she asked the meaning of social parasite

None of the three know what to make of me
Cuz their heads have been filled with your hypocrisy
Now I must decide what I'm gonna do
I think my best plan is to do the same to you.

Cuz two can play this game, life ain't solitaire
You may think you've won, but you'd better say your prayers
Vengeance is my middle name, and two can play this game.

(Bridge:) Divorce is hard enough on the kids, without each side gettin' in digs
Let's we bury the hatchet, smoke the peace pipe
Stop trashin' and actin' out of spite, all right?

Instrumental

Cuz two can play this game, I wouldn't call it unfair
Every victory, encourages warfare
Until both sides are quite insane, cuz two can play this game.

Two can play this game, life ain't solitaire
Remember we've got equal child care
When I do it to you, you'll complain, but two can play this game.
Two can play this game, it's a dirty rotten shame, but two can play this game.
