

Valentine's Day Bouquet

© Will Stanley 2015

When Josh and Janie met,
It was the kind of thing they wouldn't soon forget
Sparks flew, and they both knew
It was the best thing either had discovered yet

After a wild initial phase,
The fire tamped down to a healthy blaze
Still all their friends doubted they would last,
And thought the outcome would be a destructive blast.

On their first Valentine's Day
Josh bought a gorgeous bouquet
And told her he'd never stray.

A week went by, then it was two
Eventually, they both knew
That those flowers would not go limp
If neither skimped on remaining true.

It was the wonder of all their friends
A deep love that knew no end
And yet their circle expressed deep doubts
About how it would all turn out.

On their fifth Valentine's Day
Jane held that lovely bouquet
And promised never to stray.

As long as they got love and water every week or two
And Josh and Jane remained faithful, those flowers looked new.

Instrumental

Then one day to their surprise
Those flowers just up and died
Each eyed the other suspiciously
Cuz they figured they had been the one to cheat.

On their tenth Valentines day
They threw those flowers away
They let their love show the way.

Eternal flowers are neat
And absolutely unique
But trust makes love complete
Now their love is complete.

