

When There's No Other Choice

© 2012 Will Stanley

I stand before you to apologize
For all the dumb things that I've done
I know you're skeptical by looking in your eyes
And I must say I understand
I've let you down so many times
You must have given up
On being able to believe the things I say
No matter what
And the rule we've been discussing seems still to be in force
That I'll always do, the right thing by you,
When there's no other choice.

I'm well aware of all the heartache I have caused
I have no excuse or alibi
I guess that's just one of my many many flaws
That I don't even bother to (give it a good) try
To find a justification for the nights you spent alone
While I was out with another drenched in cheap cologne
And it would sound quite hollow, if I expressed my remorse
Cuz I always say, some lame cliché
When there's no other choice.

How could a man betray the trust
Of the woman he loves who has given him so much
I'm deeply ashamed and don't know where to start
In trying to help you heal your broken heart.

Now the discussions almost over and I think you're going to say
That it's time for me to pack my bags and be on my way
So I'll give it one more shot to try and make you change your course
You know I always do, the right thing by you
When there's no other choice.
So now I'll do, the right thing by you
Cuz there's no other choice.
There's no other choice.
